

Institutional Membership

Updated March 2022

What is an Institutional Membership?

Do you have other colleagues who would benefit from joining the International Society of Exposure Science (ISES)?

ISES is excited to offer a new institutional membership option for those individuals interested in joining the Society as part of their business or organization, including government agencies and academic institutions.

The institutional membership is a convenient option for institutions or organizations who would like multiple members of their team to be part of the premier professional society for practitioners associated with all aspects of exposure science. The institutional membership rate is $195 per person, which is paid for upfront by the host institution or organization. An institutional membership may include as many regular members as each institution or organization chooses! Institutions or organizations can also transfer memberships between individuals as teams change. Everyone registered within that institutional membership will receive all benefits of membership.

Here's what this entails:

- All member benefits, including ongoing educational content, are available to all institutional members.
- All members receive a discount on meeting registrations and other discounts.
- Voting rights are granted to each member listed by an institution as long as the institutional membership is paid in full.

These are only a few of the many benefits.

This membership opportunity is a great way to provide professional development for your teammates as well as share ideas and concepts within the ISES platforms.

Contact Sarah Dee for more information (sdee@intlexposurescience.org).